Title: Composition of Drilling Fluids Comprising Ground Elastomeric Crumb Rubber Material and a Method of Decreasing Seepage and Whole Mud Loss Using Such Composition

COMMISSIONER OF PATENTS AND TRADEMARKS
WASHINGTON, D.C. 20231

DECLARATION BY INVENTOR SUPPORTING PETITION
TO MAKE SPECIAL UNDER 37 CFR § 1.102(c)

Energy Program

M.P.E.P. § 708.02 VI states that "special" status may be accorded any patent application that materially contributes to "the discovery or development of energy resources..." Applicant's invention, entitled "Composition of Drilling Fluids Comprising Ground Elastomeric Crumb Rubber Material and a Method of Decreasing Seepage and Whole Mud Loss Using Such Composition," accomplishes this goal.

Every drilling operation, such as for oil and gas exploration, requires the circulation of a drilling fluid. The drilling fluid acts to remove drilled "cuttings" and to cool and lubricate the drill bit, among other functions. A significant portion of the fluid is lost to the surrounding formations during this process, due to seepage or fractures in the strata.

Applicant's invention is a composition of drilling fluids including elastomeric crumb rubber. When utilized during a drilling operation, the present invention can significantly reduce the amount of fluid lost to the surrounding formations. The crumb rubber is capable of bridging and sealing permeable subterranean formations better than materials currently used for this purpose.

The cost of drilling fluid is quite significant. Numerous additives must be used to obtain the proper density and viscosity of the fluid. Frequently, fluid with a base of diesel or synthetic oil is required, resulting in an even higher cost. Because some formations can lead to the loss of over 100 barrels of fluid per hour, a composition which can significantly reduce fluid loss would result in huge savings. Crumb rubber added to a drilling fluid according to the present invention can reduce fluid loss perhaps better than any other known additive.

The present invention, by reducing considerably the cost of a drilling operation, facilitates the discovery and production of many non-renewable energy sources. Therefore, the invention materially contributes to "the discovery or development of energy resources..." and should be made special.

Environmental Program

M.P.E.P. § 708.02 V accords "special" status to any application that enhances the environment "by contributing to the restoration and maintenance of the basic life-sustaining natural elements, i.e., air, water, and soil." The present invention makes such a contribution by providing a cost effective, safe way of disposing of troublesome, potentially hazardous automobile tires.

There are currently very few ways desirable ways of disposing of automobile tires. They have a tendency to rise to the top in landfills, collect water, and provide nesting grounds for disease carrying mosquitos. Many are left in large piles in the open, where they contribute to mosquito problems, sometimes catch fire (causing air pollution), and are generally unsightly.

By providing an economically advantageous (and environmentally friendly) way of disposing of tires, the present invention encourages proper disposal. Therefore, under 37 CFR § 1.102(c), this application should be "made special" because the invention will "materially enhance the quality of the environment."

For the foregoing reasons, Applicant respectfully requests that the "Composition of Drilling Fluids Comprising Ground Elastomeric Crumb Rubber Material and a Method of Decreasing Seepage and Whole Mud Loss Using Such Composition" application be "made special."
